Edinburgh, 27th April, 1784.

A FORGERY of the Guinea Note of the Bank of Scotland, dated 1st March, 1780, appeared here yesterday.

The paper on which it is done is common, without water mark; for concealing which, this forged Note has a piece of paper pasted on the back of it. There is an imitation of a Seal, but much fainter than that on the true Notes, no image within the Seal visible, and the letters of the inscription round it not legible. The engraving is a good imitation of the shape of the letters of the true Note, but the down strokes much more slender; and the names of the writer and engraver, which are in a very small character, engraved within two strokes, the one above the other below the words ONE GUINEA, at the top of the true Note, are omitted, and the two strokes left wholly black.

To put the Public on their guard, and for detecting the Forger, the Directors have ordered intimation to be immediately given in the Edinburgh news papers; and do hereby offer a REWARD OF ONE HUNDRED GUINEAS to the person or persons who shall discover the Forger, to be paid upon his conviction; and if such discoverer shall be a party concerned in it, they will apply for His Majesty's pardon to him, provided he is not the actual forger.

The account in our last of the determination of the Buckinghamshire election, copied by us from the morning papers of Saturday, was a misrepresentation, probably calculated to answer some electioneering purpose, the poll for that county still continuing open.

Those marked thus (*) were not in the last Parliament.

† Elected instead of Members in the interest of Mr Fox.

‡ Elected instead of Members who voted for Mr Pitt.

At the close of this day's poll for Westminster, the numbers were

For Lord Hood 6468

Mr Fox 5827

Sir Cecil Wray, 5806

In the expected scrutiny for the city of Westminster, all voters holding places in the army and navy, servants in any of the Royal Households, the inhabitants of the Savoy, &c. will be set aside as illegal, from their being supposed to vote under influence.

As soon as Mr Fox appeared in the boxes at Covent Garden Theatre on Saturday, a violent hissing and clapping began. The clappers at length prevailed. One gentleman observed, that the mob had got the better: Another said, that those whom the gentleman had termed Mob, always meant well; he wished he could say as much of those who call themselves the mob's superiors.

From the INDIA GAZETTE.

Extract from the Delhi Papers, Dig, Sep. 30.

ON the 23d of September about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Afrasiab Khan, Rajah Hemet Bahadar Suliman Khan, Kauzim Khan, Allibeg Khan, Khoijah Neaz Khan, Bazid Khan, Merbaan Khan, and others, mounted their horses and went to visit Mamod Beg. When they were got a mile distance, a Harcarra told them Mamod Beg was sitting in his tent, and had not mounted his horse; that his cavalry, artillery, Rohillas, &c. were about half a mile from the tent, and were assembling in different parties. Mirza Shaffey on this told Afrasiab Khan, that he suspected some deceit. Afrasiab Khan replied, I'll go and visit him first, and make enquiry of what is going forward. Mirza Shaffey with his attendants then halted. Afrasiab Khan, Bazid Khan, Merbaan Khan, and some other of Afrasiab's servants, to the amount of 200, marched on. On seeing them coming, Mamod Beg with his nephew Aga Ismael mounted their elephants, and came out to meet him. After the usual compliments and talking a little, Afrasiab Khan returned and informed the Nabob, that he might go on without fear. The Nabob went on with only a few horse, and took Hakeem Ally Couli Khan on the elephant with him. Mamod Amin Khan also accompanied him. The Nabob's attendants and Mamod Beg's saluted each other, and at the same time the cavalry and artillery that were half a mile distance approached. Mamod Amin Khan imagining there was some villainy going on, told the Nabob that it would be better to return to his guards. The Nabob replied, "I will not return without paying the visit; whatever is to happen, let it happen;" and with a few people went on a little and stopped; to which place Mamod Beg came and salam'd, putting his hands together. In order to talk to the Nabob, he ordered his elephant to be put in a line with the Nabob's. His Nephew also did the same, in the following order: Mamod Beg on one side, and his Nephew on the other, and the Nabob in the centre. Mamod Amin Khan was spokesman for the Nabob. They then began to talk together. At this period, Mamod Beg took hold of the Nabob's right hand, and pulled it towards him. The Nabob pulled it from him, and put his left hand on his shoulder. Mamod Beg again laid hold of his hand, and pulled it towards him; and his nephew, (Aga Ismael) at the same time, with a dagger stabbed him on the left side; the Nabob then turned towards Ismael, and Mamod Beg stabbed him on the right side; on which he died, and his body fell from the elephant. Aga Ismael also fell. Mamod Amin Khan immediately killed the driver of Ismael's elephant, and was himself killed by Mamod Beg's people. On the news of his, guns and matchlocks began to fire. The few people that Mirza Shaffey took with him ran away; in the course of which Zaduk Beg Khan was shot through the breast, and Daood Beg Khan was also wounded. The troops on both sides began a skirmish, and the gates of Dig were all shut. Afrasiab Khan promised his troops a month's pay as a reward. Near six hundred men were killed on both sides. On Mamod Beg's side, Ally Khan, Jemadar of Rohillas, was killed. Meer Fatty Ally and Couli Beg took the body of the Nabob upon his elephant and carried it to a garden. The skirmish lasted for seven hours; four hundred men on the Nabob's side were wounded, and five hundred on the other side killed and wounded. Mamod Beg, at ten o'clock at night, returned to his tent."

The Nabob Mirza Shafy Khan was nephew to the late Nujiff Khan, and had succeeded him, not only in his estates and titles, but also in his dominion over the King.

E D I N B U R G H.

Extract of a letter from London, April 27.

"London has not, for some days past, exhibited any event of sufficient importance to attract public curiosity, or excite political speculation. The novelty of the contest in Westminster is over, and the public curiosity grows colder as the passions of the partisans of the contending parties increase. During the present interregnum, or interval, in the grand business of legislation, the eyes of men are turned from the capital to the scenes that pass in different parts of the country. We are told, that not less than half the Scotch members in the new Parliament will be in opposition to the present Ministry. This is a new phenomenon in the political world; which we know not how to account for on any general principle. It is obvious, however, to the most transient observation, that the progress of government, and of intercourse between Scotland and England, has molded the two nations very much into one, and emancipated the Scotch nobility and gentry from many illiberal prejudices, as well as from the influence of certain powerful Chiefs, who governed the Scotch nation by uniting to their own authority the patronage and power of the Court.

"The restraint that has been lately imposed by the Irish Parliament on the liberty of the press, makes not a little noise here, where pamphlets, newspapers, reviews, and magazines, give employment to so many scribblers, and amusement to so many idlers. The more moderate and judicious, however, acknowledge, that the conduct of the Irish Legislature, with regard to the Printers, was proper, wise, and necessary. The ideas of assassination, disseminated in the Dublin newspapers, are a disgrace to the Irish nation. Such fomenters of barbarity and ferocity, however we are obliged by truth to make exceptions in favour of the Irish nobility and gentry, prove that the great body of the people, in point of humanity and civilization, are much behind most countries in Europe. It is Ireland, too, that furnishes assassins to the desperate politicians of London.

"The affairs of Holland form a very general subject of conversation among our politicians, who will have it, that nothing is intended by the aristocratical faction under the influence of France, than the dethronement of the Stadholder, and the subversion of the civil constitution of the Republic. It appears evident, that the King of Prussia is not alarmed. It is to be hoped that this aged monarch, his successor, and other Princes and states, will possess both vigilance and vigour to prevent the United Provinces from becoming an accession, either in reality or in form, to the French and the Austrians.

"Mr Fox, as you will see by the evening papers, has turned the tide against Sir Cecil Wray. His party are in high spirits, and confident of success. On the part of Mr Fox the greatest exertions are made that are imaginable. Persons of all ranks, professions, and sexes are in his service. He has drawn over to his side all the Popish priests, as well as the late great Champion for the Protestant interest, who daily harangues in his favour; —a Coalition no less wonderful than some others, concerning which so much noise has been made!"

Extract of a letter from an Officer on board the San Carlos, dated Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope, Dec. 20. 1783.

"We sailed from Madras the 2d of October, and arrived here the 9th instant, after a most awful storm which we had off this place. We were obliged to throw overboard some of the guns to save the ship, being water-logged, the pumps choked, and seven feet water in our hold, and upwards of an hundred sick people in fevers and scurvy. The Scipio, of 64 guns, was totally dismasted, and many of the ships in very perilous situations. The Exeter, 64, is all torn to pieces by the gale; and I believe she and the San Carlos are to be surveyed, and condemned, not being thought safe to go home in."

"The Dutch people here are very malevolent and shy of us. They will not allow us to land our sick anywhere but on Robbin Island, a barren place, where they confine their malefactors, slaves, and criminals. They will hardly give us the common comforts of fresh provisions, even for paying at a most enormous rate for them. Two English shillings are charged for a cabbage, and every thing else in proportion. We will remain three months at least, at this place, on account of the great sickness which is in the fleet, and the want of repairs.—The Swallow packet arrived here a few days ago, nine weeks from England."

Different accounts being published in the newspapers respecting the Earl of Cheshiresfield, Captain Boswell, we have unexceptionable authority to say, that by letters from Calcutta, dated the 6th November last, she was then at that port all well. She had sprung a leak after leaving Bengal in May, and was obliged in June to return to rest; but, at the date of the above letter, she was completely repaired, and in as good order as when she left dock, and was to proceed in a few days after on her voyage to Mangalore and Bombay, and from thence, it was expected, to China.

Yesterday, was married here, William Smith of Forrester, Esq; to Miss Hay, daughter of the deceased James Hay of Cockburn, Esq; Clerk to the Signet.

On Tuesday last, was safely delivered here of a son, Mrs Captain Gordon of Pitlurg.

Monday last, died at Neilston manse, the Rev. Mr John Wilson, minister of that parish.

Yesterday, the Right Hon. the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council, the Reverend Ministers, and the General Sessions of Edinburgh, met to moderate in a call to two ministers to supply the vacancies occasioned by the deaths of the Rev. Dr Robert Dick, and the Rev. Mr Robert Walker.—The Rev. Mr Thomas Hardie, minister at Balingray, and the Rev. Mr Greenfield, minister at Wemyss, were chosen: the former gentleman almost unanimously, and the latter by a considerable majority.

The tragedy of Runnmede, written by a Gentleman of considerable reputation in the poetical world, and a Clergyman of the Church of Scotland, we are happy to observe, [see advertisement in this night's paper] will soon find its way to our Theatre. As few tragedies have afforded greater pleasure in the closet, there is every reason to believe its exhibition on the stage will be equally favourable to the Author, as well as the Performers, whose utmost exertions will no doubt be used to give satisfaction to the audience, which their high opinion of the poem will lead them to expect.

We have authority to say, that the report of Mrs Siddons having declined coming to perform at this Theatre, is without foundation.

James Torry, Esq; one of the Magistrates of this city, is elected elder to represent the burgh of Wigton, at the ensuing General Assembly.

On Thursday, came on at Lanark the election of a representative in Parliament for that county, when Sir James Stewart Denham, of Coltness and Westfield, Bart. was unanimously elected.

Frederick McKenzie Humberstone, Esq; is elected representative in Parliament for Ross-shire, vice Lord McLeod.

Sir Archibald Edmonstone, of Duntrath, Bart. is re-elected for the burghs of Ayr, Irvine, Kintyre, Rothesay, and Campbellton.

The county of Fife is the first that has adopted the plan of erecting a Bridewell. It is much to be wished that this national object could be speedily carried into execution, as daily experience evinces, more and more, the necessity of such an institution.—We hear there have been several very handsome subscriptions for the above purpose.

Thursday night, about six o'clock, we had a storm of hail, thunder, and lightning, very uncommon at this season.

The following extraordinary circumstance happened in a house in this city on Thursday last. The family had for dinner a dressed calf's head, with brain fritters composed of the brains, grated bread, and flour, cast into round cakes in a Dutch fritter pan. A girl who sat at table discovered a pin in the cake of which she was eating; and her mother almost at the same instant found a pin in that which lay on her plate. She immediately examined half a cake which lay on the plate of a little boy, in which there were two pins, but in the mean time the boy put a bit of his half cake in his mouth: he was ordered to spit it out, and in it there was a pin also—in all five pins, which were rusty and crooked, and one of them wanting the head. The above, however unavoidable, is a correct and literal fact: Had it happened a century ago, in all probability it would have been the cause of bringing some unfortunate wretch to the stake.

Ripe Peaches and Nectarines were gathered on Thursday last, in the garden of the Hon. Baron Stewart of Moredun.

Extract of a letter from Simbister in Shetland, April 20.

"We had here a most singular appearance on the 16th current. About 12 o'clock, we observed a double circle round the sun; the two circles coincided above the sun, and were very luminous, so as to dazzle the eyes; the greater circle was also very luminous in the lower part, so as almost to equal the brightness of the sun itself. In the S. E. and S. W. quarters, parts of two rainbows became visible: had each of them been complete, they would have terminated in the N. E. and N. W. quarters. In the north part of the hemisphere, about 60 degrees above the horizon, and directly opposite to the sun, there appeared a luminous point, which soon extended, and became three circles intersecting each other; one of these was quite complete, and terminated in the body of the sun, passing through the circles formerly mentioned, which surrounded the sun, and was there very luminous; the other two were only parts of circles, about 90 degrees of one and 60 of the other appearing; had they been complete, they would have touched the horizon, one in the east, and the other in the west; these were of a bright white, and about the breadth of a rainbow. These appearances continued for about an hour, the day serene and calm, sky very clear, the thermometer about 55 degrees in the shade."
